Cash Rolls In As Tax Campaign Is Continued

Tax Sale Likely To Be Held
In October, Town
Clerk States

PENALTIES ARE $1,500

Since May 1 the town's tax arrears campaign has brought in $2,700, and a total of $13,013.35 since the first of the year, N. L. Mathews, K.C., town treasurer, reported to the town council on Monday evening.

"That is very good," commented the mayor, Dr. S. J. Boyd.

"In addition we have collected penalties of $1,500," Mr. Mathews said.

"Is there any announcement concerning the tax sale?" asked Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales.

"We are giving some of them a little more time," said Mr. Mathews. "There has to be three months' advertising."

"You are getting quite a response?" queried Dr. Dales.

"Oh, yes," declared Mr. Mathews. "Some are making regular

CATHOLIC WOMEN MEET

The members of the Catholic Women's League of Newmarket and Aurora met in a body to receive Holy Communion in St. John's Catholic church, Newmarket, last Sunday morning at the 8.30 mass.

A lovely communion breakfast was served in St. John's parish club rooms after mass. Members of the league were honored in having as their guest speaker Miss Mae O'Callaghan, treasurer of the Catholic Women's League of Toronto, who was accompanied by her friend, Miss Egan, also of Toronto. Mrs. Bernard McHale, president of the Newmarket branch, introduced the speaker. Mrs. J. J. McCaffrey moved a vote of thanks and Mrs. Butler seconded it. About 40 members were in attendance.

H.I.P. Double-Barrelled Aim Is More Work, Nicer Homes

Plan Strikes At Heart Of Unemployment Situation
Says H. F. Irwin

"When there are improvements to be made, it is usually the ladies who take the lead," T. F. Doyle, chairman of the Newmarket Home Improvement Plan committee, told a meeting held under the joint auspices of W. H. Eves as a Johns-Manville distributor and the local H. I. P. committee, in the R. S. A. Bugle Band hall last Friday evening.

"The purpose of the Home Improvement Plan is to improve our Canadian homes and to give employment," said Mr. Doyle.

"Some have the means and others have not. In order to help those who have, the government has formed this plan."

"There are many places in town where some improvement could be made," Mr. Eves said in welcoming the audience. "Many people have not the money to make these needed improvements and the government plan is to help them."

"A year ago this month the government appointed the national employment commission," said H. F. Irwin, representative of the Ontario advisory committee of the H. I. P. "The first thing they did was to analyze the situation. They found that 50 per cent of those on relief were unemployed. Of the other 50 per cent they found that 60 per cent belonged to the building trades.

"They adopted the Home Improvement Plan. It goes on all the year around. Of every $1 spent on home improvement, 75 cents goes to labor. This plan hits at the very heart of the unemployment situation."

"Another reason for adopting this plan was its success in the United States. Five hundred million dollars were loaned, and four or five dollars were spent for every one lent by the government."

"During the last four or five years home improvements haven't been made. You have approximately 60,000 unemployed in the building trades, and on the other hand 500,000 homes that need improvements."

"There are two phases to the plan: (1) to stimulate people who have money to go ahead and

Children Bitten By Dogs, Offer Commission On Tax

Pay Two Bils Per Dog To Tax Collector As Complaints Made

A commission on dog tax collections will be paid by the town in order to check a growing nuisance, the council decided on Monday evening.

"The inspector should go from door to door, and collect the taxes," said Councillor George Williams, telling of a complaint from a householder whose garden had been devastated by dogs.

"I think we should take steps immediately to collect the dog tax," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd. "People had better get ready to pay their tax, or to dispose of their dogs."

"Dogs will be still here after we are all gone," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "The constable hasn't the time. I think we should pay someone a commission to collect the tax. I have had three children in the last two weeks bitten by dogs, one quite seriously."

"There are a lot of dogs in this town that have no homes. I saw several strays down at the dump the other day."

"Is there any report from the board of health on the garbage collection?" asked Councillor Williams.

"Not yet, it will take time," said the mayor.

"How are we going to finance it?" asked Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale. "We have struck our rate for this year."

"We will have to get it started before winter," insisted Dr. Boyd. "A resolution was passed authorizing the police commission to appoint 'a suitable citizen' to collect the dog taxes and to allow him 25 cents per tax and that collections start from June 1, and 'be thorough and complete'."

"Whom have you got in mind?" Dr. Dales was asked.

"Wellington Curtis," Dr. Dales said.

"Did he ever get the $5 for poundkeeper?" asked Councillor George Williams.

"Yes," said N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor.

TORIES ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Number Of Names Mentioned As Possible
Candidates

North York Conservatives held their annual meeting here on Saturday afternoon. Election of officers and a new executive is expected to be preliminary to a nominating convention.

North York Conservatives have been advised by provincial Conservative leaders to prepare for an election, and no time is being lost in clearing the decks for action.

Some in the party regard Morgan Baker, Liberal M. L. A., as unbeatable at the present time, but that others are more confident is evidenced by the number of names that are being mentioned for the nomination.

Among those most frequently mentioned as willing to carry the standard are Dr. S. J. Boyd, mayor of Newmarket, Clifford Case, Aurora, former M. L. A., and T. A. M. Hulse, young Aurora barrister.

Another name now mentioned as a possible candidate is that of J. C. Steckley, former professor of animal husbandry at Ontario Agricultural College, and now county agricultural representative in western Ontario. Mr. Steckley's home is at Bethesda.

OUTSIDERS TO BE SHUT OUT TILL 9 A.M.

Householders To Get First Chance To Buy At Local Market

POSTPONE OPENING

The Saturday morning market will be held later than it has been since daylight saving time came into effect, the council decided on Monday evening. The market will open at 8.15 a.m., with buyers for retail sale prohibited from buying until 9 o'clock.

T. F. Doyle and W. C. Lundy appeared before the council to explain the situation. They were representing themselves only, Mr. Doyle said, but he had talked with other merchants in all lines of trade and they were unanimous on the subject.

"The market building is opened at 7.30 a.m., and the market is started at 8," Mr. Doyle said. "The market is all over before 9 o'clock. It is detrimental to business."

"We would like to see the market building opened at 8.30 a.m. and have the market open at 9 o'clock."

"I think there is, away back, a by-law which says that the market opens at 9 o'clock," said Mr. Lundy.

"I think it is 8 or 8.30," said N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor. "But there is a provision that no buyer for retail sale shall purchase before 9 o'clock. That by-law is broken freely by outside buyers. The other day my wife was buying a chicken at 8.20 a.m., and a buyer came along and took the lot, with the result that she could not purchase a chicken at all. I have had the same thing happen myself."

"There is no one in charge of the market," said Mr. Doyle. "We used to have a market clerk. I have often thought, with men on relief, we should have someone there to carry the women's baskets and make the farmers' wives feel at home. Our market is dwindling to nothing at all. You could have shot a cannonball through there on Saturday. We used to have wonderful markets years ago."

MUST BELONG TO NEW CO-OP

Established under the authority of an act of the legislature, a co-operative marketing scheme to control and stabilize disposal of the crops from the Holland Marsh area was approved by a meeting of growers last Thursday night.

Prof. W. H. Day, president of the co-operative, said that the growers had formed a co-operative in order to prevent truckers playing the growers off against each other to deprive the growers of a fair profit.

There will be compulsory licensing of all growers, all buyers and all truckers of produce from the marsh.

Estimates Requested To Accomodate Police Court

It begins to look as though Newmarket is going to have a police court, to sit one day a week or more if necessary, saving lawyers, witnesses, defendants and complainants tedious trips to the city.

N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk, had word at the council meeting Monday evening from Morgan Baker, M. L. A., to that effect. Mr. Baker expected the appointment to be made before this.

The council requested the public works committee to submit "plans and estimates for a county police court, which is to be established in Newmarket, to this council at the next regular meeting."

The council also authorized, on the motion of Councillor George Williams, purchase of a picture of King George VI for the council chamber at a cost not exceeding $12.

RED NINE PLAY COLLEGE SQUAD HERE TONIGHT

Teams Meet On Pickering
Grounds For First
Game Of Season

COLLEGE WANTS WIN

The Redmen will have their initial softball trial when they meet a Pickering College team at 7.15 tonight.

The game will be played on the college grounds, not at Stuart Scott school grounds, as intimated elsewhere in this issue.

This game is expected to reveal some of the Redmen's pitching strength, which up to now has been a matter of conjecture.

Alex. Webster, man-of-the-mountain, moundsman of last year's Redmen, looked to be in fine shape in the practice held Tuesday night. Ivan Eves, star heavier for last year's Sharon team, is expected to take a turn for the Reds tonight. Then too, there is the mysterious south-paw lurking up Joe Spillet's sleeve, who, it is rumored, has enough on the ball to give it a permanent wave.

The Redmen pack last year's strength and more, in other departments.

Pickering's strength is unknown, but it is certain that they will be looking for a victory over the Redmen.

GO-OPERATION OFFERED

Introduced and seconded by two ex-mayors, J. E. Nesbitt and W. H. Eves, a resolution urging the town council to advocate construction of a provincial highway between Schomberg and Peterboro, was adopted by the town council on Monday evening.

"We are asked not to stress the route, but to leave that to the department," Mr. Nesbitt said.

"If all the municipalities ask for the highway, without quarrelling about the route, it is bound to be constructed."

Main St. would not lose any business if the highway should go across Huron St., routing lake traffic that way instead of through the town, Mr. Eves declared.

The resolution was as follows: "Whereas it has come to the attention of the members of this Newmarket Lions club that the Ontario department of highways

"The location where the meeting was held was almost ideal," Councillor Arthur Evans, chairman of the town's coronation committee, reported to the council on Monday evening. Mr. Evans paid tribute to the work of two fellow members of the committee, Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale and Councillor A. V. Higginson.

"The way the youngsters sang those songs made the people of Newmarket feel proud of their school children," Mr. Evans said. "The splendid address by Capt. Davis, and the rest of the service, more than brought the program up to expectations."

"It is a pity the grounds couldn't be used more," Mr. Evans said. "It is too bad that the school children couldn't give their 24th of May exercises there. There would be two or three hundred citizens who would turn out to see them."

Members of the council suggested that Mr. Evans communi-

Meeting-Houses Stand Side

Sentiment was unanimous for retaining and repairing the old Friends meeting house for a community centre at a meeting of the Pine Orchard Women's Institute yesterday, the many old residents and friends of Pine Orchard will be interested to learn.

One of the two historic Quaker meeting-houses, standing side by side as a memorial to a century-old split in the Quaker sect, is known as the "little white meeting-house" and is used by the Pine Orchard union church. The other, known as the "old meeting-house," and it has been suggested variously that it should be torn down or moved away for other use. It is now used as a Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd said that the council had struck its rate, and that if necessary the board would have to overdraw its bank account.

The King George school lavatories were out-of-date and unsanitary and have been modernized. The Era is informed. Changes need to be made in the Stuart Scott school lavatories also, it is stated.

ORILLIA'S TOWN MANAGER

Orillia is playing with the idea of a town manager. The clerk and treasurer, a lady, has resigned, and the town has advertised for applicants to fill the post, adding that "applications will be favored from persons qualified to assume the duties of town manager, should the town of Orillia adopt such a form of government in the future." It seems, however, that the new deputy minister of municipal affairs, E. A. Horton and A. J. B. Gray, supervisor of defaulting municipalities, do not approve of the town manager form of municipal government. They visited Orillia the other day to tell the mayor that they considered that this system placed too autocratic powers in the hands of an individual, and suggested that the town consider instead the appointment of a comptroller to act as treasurer and as purchasing agent for the town, the water, light and power commission, the board of education, the board of health and all municipal bodies.

Getting Information

The town is expecting a visit from two members of the Chatham city council to explain to a public meeting the council-manager system of municipal government, which has been in successful operation in Chatham for 15 years. The Chatham system was authorized by a special act of the legislature.

Chatham's System

The Chatham system, also in effect in Niagara Falls, is described as follows:

"The council-manager system provides an ideal combination of popular control with administrative efficiency. Through the elective mayor and council the citizens retain control of the shaping of municipal policies, and of the actual appointment of the city manager and other officials. It is the duty of the city manager, as executive head, to carry out the policies laid down by the elective council. In actual detail administration he has a free hand. The result is a better co-ordination of administrative activities and greater efficiency and economy in municipal affairs."

"Efficient methods have been very needful in the recent difficult years; and here the council manager system shows to good advantage. For 1936, Chatham has a tax rate of 34 mills, of which slightly less than 12½ mills is for education. The mill rate is one of the lowest in Ontario. Relief expenditures have been handled out of current revenues. Chatham's debenture debt has been steadily reduced, and within three years the general debenture debt, chargeable on the assessment, will be almost entirely wiped out. Chatham's per capita debenture debt is the lowest of any city in Canada."

Let's Investigate

Discussing this question of a town manager on previous occasions, The Era has variously expressed itself as interested in and as dubious of a town manager system. It would be at least educational to secure, as Orillia is doing, some first-hand information on the subject.

HERE AND THERE

What are the towns of Ontario doing? What are the villages doing? Daily newspapers can thrive only in great centres of population, and so it is that we hear far more about what city people are doing than about what people in other towns like our own are doing, or about what farmers are doing. We suppose, however, that less than half of Ontario's three million people are living in cities, and the unhappy half at that.

Looking through some of the weekly newspapers of the province we find accounts of interesting happenings which cannot possibly all find their way into the columns of our dailies.

For instance, meeting in Port Perry, the Oshawa presbytery of the United church objected to radio advertising on Sundays and to radio liquor advertising over Canadian stations.

One of Ontario's still existing agricultural fairs takes place at Orono. It is supposed to be a Durham county fair, but fear is expressed by the Bowmanville Statesman that there are those who would wish it down to a merely Orono fair. Fear is also expressed that the purpose of the fair, namely, the encouragement of local agriculture and arts, may be defeated through too many "open classes," admitting professional outside showmen.

Five parents appeared before the Orono continuation school board recently to complain of "maltreatment of pupils."

And while we are still in Durham county, we note that the village of Newcastle "was right royally decorated for the coronation. The celebration as arranged was carried through without a hitch, and on Tuesday evening the municipal council with due ceremony planted a tree in the community hall grounds to commemorate the event."

In Kirkland Lake a coroner's jury inquired into the death of a miner in a steam bath. Without knowing what was the matter with himself, he had been suffering from pneumonia for three days, and the change of temperature when he entered the bath had caused a shock which resulted in death. A Kirkland Lake beer salesman gave evidence that he had seen the man, just before the fatal steam bath, refused beer in a hotel because "he was too sick."

The town of Cobalt is being sued for $10,000 by a local C. C., whose furniture the town seized for several years arrears of taxes. The lawyer said that his practice had been damaged by the unfavorable publicity. The judge remarked, in reserving judgment, concerning the lawyer's case, that "whatever legal merits it may have, morally it has none." He advised the town to keep out of trouble in the future by consulting its solicitor before making seizures.

Still in northern Ontario, we note that a very tall man, unidentified so far as we know, stole a suit of clothes from a Noranda clothes line. The line was a considerable distance from the ground. Perhaps it was a short man on horse-back.

At Orillia, in Couchiching park near the Champlain monument, in the course of a coronation celebration, "Chief John Big Wind, who will be 98 years of age in August, was presented with a silver medal by Alderman Stone, chairman of the coronation committee. Chief Big Wind has been decorated by two sovereigns, Queen Victoria and King George V. In his address the aged chief mentioned the fact that he had two meals with King George and Queen Mary. He said he knew that the new king had heavy responsibilities.

David Simcoe sang an Indian song composed 100 years ago."

At Kahshe Lake, in the Orillia district, an undenominational church has been built and dedicated.

A Mennonite bishop talked to a crowded church on the eighth concession of Markham for two hours. Even the aisles were packed. He advised his hearers to have nothing to do with worldly things. They should not vote. They should not go to war, for war is but a national hysteria and it is the duty of the church to live a peaceful life. No Christian should vote, and when all become Christians there will be no need for present methods of government. Theocracy, he said, will have replaced democracy.

Melville United church, on the fourth concession of Markham township, has just received a bequest of $8,000, out of a total estate of $19,000, from a local resident. In younger days James Francey, the testator, had been a school teacher and at one time taught at Siloam, in Uxbridge township.

In northern Markham township there has been a series of chicken thefts. The Stouffville Tribune says: "Since our recent article the henry on the farm of Joe Kirk, eighth concession, was raided last Friday night and every bird removed from the roosts. Only two old cluckers were left for the farmer." The thieves either overlooked or did not want the two sit-down strikers.

Bracebridge is attaching its lighting fixtures to buildings and is removing all poles and light standards from its main street.

Orillia is asking for estimates on the cost of a modernized lighting system for its main street.

PROVINCIAL ELECTION

A number of signs, all of which may be misleading, point to a provincial election this summer. There is plenty of criticism of the government, but there is no widespread demand for an election. If an election comes, it will come because the government or the Liberal party sees a good chance of being returned to power. For much of its conduct the government deserves praise; for much condemnation. We can all agree on those points, but we cannot agree about which acts deserve condemnation, which praise.

Bones Of Contention

Some of the contentious points in the Hepburn record are: collection of past due succession duties; administration of Liquor Control Act and beer amendments; cancellation of Hydro contracts; taking over of municipal income tax; separate school legislation; re-making of Hydro contracts; handling of Oshawa strike. We suggest that it would be difficult for any person to go out on the street and find another person who would agree with himself on each of these issues.

Admiration, Condemnation

We fancy that few premiers have been so blindly admired and so intolerantly despised. Mr. Hepburn has been colorful. He has walked where angels fear to tread. He has been ready of tongue to denounce those who have stood in his way and those who have been, in his opinion, the enemies of the common people. Mr. Hepburn bearded the financial lions in their dens. More recently, he has been charged with consorting with the lions.

Easy Come, Easy Go

The lions themselves are tongue-tied since Mr. Hepburn has balanced his budget. Mr. Hepburn started out as an economist. He sold the province's automobiles at public auction. He let the axe fall to cut the province's civil service list. But improving times, for which Mr. Hepburn (be it to his everlasting credit) has not claimed the credit, has filled the provincial coffers to overflowing and Mr. Hepburn has spent money with the same courage and boldness with which he saved it.

There are two sides to all these questions that Mr. Hepburn has dealt with so boldly. If you are a wealthy man and want to leave as much of your estate as possible to your children you know that Mr. Hepburn, with his energetic succession duty collection policy, must be a rogue. If you believe in a "more equal distribution of wealth," you know Mr. Hepburn is perfectly right and that only heavy succession duties and heavy income taxes can keep the capitalist system functioning. If you are a temperance man or woman, you know that Mr. Hepburn, with his push-beer-sales as a source of provincial revenue (including the abolition of beer permits), has been careless of moral values; if you are a moderation advocate, or a liberty-of-the-individual advocate, you believe that the Hepburn beer administration has been a step forward. You may regard the separate school legislation as a courageous attempt to right an injustice or you may think it an attempt to buy votes. (You may believe in liberty-of-the-individual in the matter of beer, and yet not believe in liberty-of-the-individual to support the school of his choice.) Our opinions on the matter of the Hydro contracts cancellation may well depend on whether we hold any bonds ourselves (not necessarily power company bonds) and whether we would like any of our companies' nice contracts cancelled. In the Oshawa strike, now that it is over, we see no clear-cut issue. Both sides say that they believe in the right of labor to organize and both sides are opposed to law-breaking in the form of sit-down strikes; the difference of opinion seems to be on the question of whether an organization that has been guilty of law-breaking in another country should be barred (if possible) from this country.

Love Me, Love Me Not

Mr. Hepburn has been bold and colorful, a doer and a talker, seemingly regardless of whom he might offend. He has won friends and enemies. In an election the outcome will depend on whether he has made more friends than enemies. Mr. Hepburn no doubt feels that he has slain his thousands but has captivated his tens of thousands. Only the ballot boxes will tell.

Rowe Not An Issue

It is one of the peculiarities of our system of party government that the election when it comes will not be a choice between Hepburn and Rowe, but a vote on the question of Hepburn or no-Hepburn. Mr. Rowe will be just an incidental result if the vote should result in a no-Hepburn verdict. We would then begin to get acquainted with Mr. Rowe. Opposition leaders, for this reason, spend more of their time pointing to the weaknesses of the government in power than confessing what they are likely to do if they get a chance.

The Northern News of Kirkland Lake informs us that "the governor-general will wear a cowboy hat at the Calgary stampede. And, we hope, John Buchan will acquire enough western lore to give Richard Hannay an adventure in western Canada." That would be nice. Then any of us could ride a Buchan broncho.

HIP, HIP, HURRAY!

Interest in the Home Improvement Plan in Newmarket is keen. Interest in building, aside from the HIIP, is even keener. It is estimated that for every dollar borrowed under the plan, three or four will be spent by those who don't have to borrow.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

"Cavalcade of Empire"

There are days that stand out in our lives as unparalleled and unforgettable.

I told you, last week, that I was going to the coronation—and how—so of course it is no news to you that I woke in London, on Wednesday the 12th, to the sound of great bells and the indescribable, muted thunder of a great multitude, which had gathered to crown their king, in their hearts, as truly as the Archbishop of Canterbury crowned him in the Abbey.

Without the all-night vigil that many kept to "see the King go by," without the hurrying and scurrying, jostling and crushing that many encountered and endured, I turned my magic key, and ghost-like entered the Abbey, and with millions and millions of others was ready to "see with my ears," the great scenes enacted in that old repository of British history.

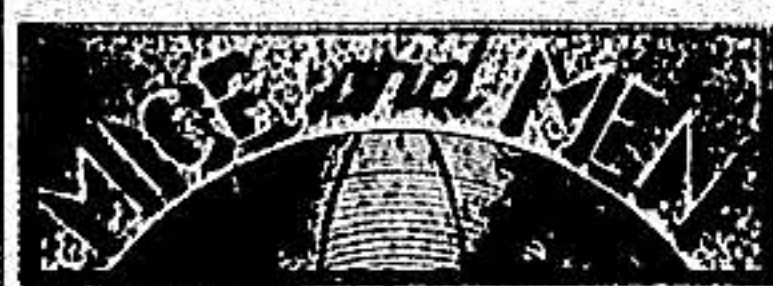

What a thrill there was in the fact that our own scarlet-coated mountrains, the fame of whose law-enforcing prowess is certainly not confined to Canada, formed part of that breath-taking cavalcade; added warmth and color to the thought that the King was being crowned King of Canada; also that our own prime minister and our own standard showed how integral a part we were of the great Commonwealth of nations.

In all that great day, with its richness of velvet and fur, its flashing splendor of jewels, its gathering together of the great of many lands, and its incredible crowds, there were a few things which, to me, outshone them all, and will live in my heart forever.

One thing was the patience, stick-to-itiveness and sheer pluck of the crowds, who having no money to spare for seats, kept vigil through the long cold, wet night, without complaint and without losing any of the loyalty and enthusiasm pent within them.

Then the arrival of the queen-mother seemed to awaken a chord of sympathy and understanding in every heart. Regal and stately, truly queen-like as always, one felt that beneath the proud exterior, the bereft wife's heart visioned the throne filled once again with a well-loved form. And the mother's heart, rejoicing at the throning of one son, yet saw in memory a son self-exiled.

Long and loud were the cheers which greeted her, and it must have been heart-warming, yes, and healing, to feel how deeply

Police threw a cordon around Nelson's Pillar, Dublin's famous landmark, on Sunday night, fearing an attempt might be made by republicans to bomb it. On Thursday a bomb wrecked a Dublin square. Anti-imperialists staged several disorders last week in protest against the coronation of King George VI as she was enshrined in the hearts of the people. Too, the little Princesses added a very human note to the almost dream-like quality of the occasion. Even if they looked like Princesses out of a fairy-tale, they were very human, small girls, the very smallest wriggling and uneasy just as you or I might have wriggled uneasily if our six-year-old legs had to dangle for hours while unintelligible things were done about us, and we longed to laugh and sing and even dance.

Because I have Scottish blood in my veins, I suppose it seemed especially good to know that a Queen of Scots would once again look from the windows of Holyrood Palace and Edinburgh Castle, and banish the sadness which has lain heavy in the old place since Mary of Scotland lived out her brief, tragic reign.

I fancy that every one of us felt lifted into some place of heavenly joy when those boys' ecstatic voices soared aloft in that vast old Abbey. There was a quality—vibrant, pure and unearthly, in the singing and the music, altogether—which seemed to emphasize and accent the reverent, beautiful voice of the Archbishop; and the fanfares, punctuated by the ringing, "God Save King George," from the corners of the Abbey, took us again to the realm of romance and Anthony Hope's novels.

But, for bravery, for pathos, for dogged determination, the King's speech, to me, deserved more than a crown.

More than anything else in that day of barbaric pageantry, religious significance, vows and promises, nothing promised more for the future of our land than the King's speech.

One felt the concentrated effort, superhumanly strong, which forced His Majesty to send his voice over his far-flung Empire.

There was, in his determination, his overcoming of an almost unsurmountable obstacle—a promise for the future, a baring of the very heart of the man, that his subjects might see that difficult as it was for him to speak on such an occasion, duty far over-rode a selfish hesitancy to venture a speech so exacting.

Duty which would incite to such an effort will never allow a let-down and so, knowing our King is such a man, brave above all, and with an almost Puritanic sense of what is obligatory, we can say from our hearts "God save the King!"

Pecker Meets A Noble Lord's Namesake

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"Why, greetings, Mr. Oriole!" exclaimed Mr. Pecker, the Downy Woodpecker. "It's nice to see your orange and black feathers flashing around here again and to hear your loud, cheerful warble."

"Oh, Happy New Spring to you, Mr. Pecker!" replied the Oriole. "Yes, my wife and I like this district. The next thing is to pick out a nice spot for our hanging cradle. Of course, we won't be nesting until the end of the month, but a nest like ours isn't built in a moment."

"My wife is very particular about our home, you know," he said. "She takes a fibre in her long, sharp bill and pokes it through the side of the nest and then reaches over inside and pulls it through and makes it tight. In that way she weaves a fine, strong nest. My wife prides herself on her knitting and weaving. You see, our nests have to stand a lot of wind and weather, away out, swinging from the tip of some branch."

"Well, I'm afraid my wife and I don't believe in spoiling our babies by swinging them to sleep in a hammock in the wind like that," rejoined Pecker. "Our children are never rocked to sleep, and of course our nest is perfectly stationary in the tree trunk. You can just ruin a bird baby's disposition by being too indulgent."

"Why, the very idea!" chirped Mr. Oriole. "Our method is the very best and we teach our children to be kind and useful by eating up a great many harmful insects."

"Now, don't get mad, old chap," said Pecker, "I meant no offense. Seriously though, you won't see a finer family anywhere than mine will be. We have five lovely glossy-white eggs right now."

"Our eggs are a trifle larger than yours, I think," said the Oriole. "Of course, I don't like a plain white egg, myself. Ours will be a pinkish white with all sorts of blotches and lines on them. These marks make a kind

Notes . . . To You

Explanatory Note

There would seem to be three opinions concerning this column; one, that it is not to be taken seriously; two, that it is to be taken seriously; three, that it is not to be taken at all. In order to be simply matters for our readers—both of them—and to clear up matters in our own mind, we have made a change.

Hereafter, when we want to get some drive off our chest, we will ask the linotypist to set it in light face type like this. When, however, we get peeved at somebody or something, we shall have the same over-obliging linotypist set our peeve in bold face, like this.

We hope you will smile obligingly when you read the light face type. And we hope that you will become as peeved as we are when you read the big, bold, bold face type. Please try not to get them confused—we're just a little touchy on the subject.

Note Of Felicitation

We congratulate two-year-old Lorraine Langlois of Sudbury, who successfully swallowed a quarter of Wednesday of last week. Lorraine may not be in the money, but the money is still in Lorraine.

Note Of Self-Satisfaction

Evidently the two gentlemen, H. E. Rice and P. H. Rice, had quite a time putting out their ever-interesting Huntsville Forester last week. According to an announcement on their front page, "Owing to unexpected advertising it has been necessary to hold over a considerable amount of local news."

In congratulating the Forester on its windfall, we pause from preening ourselves in front of the mirror long enough to remark that when advertising comes to The Era it is never unexpected. We have a way of finding out these things. We know we have it coming to us.

An Ever-Helpful Note

Roger Babson, the American economist, says the Midland Free Press, pointedly remarks that inquiring who is winning the industrial warfare going on all over America today is like asking the question: "Who won the San Francisco earthquake?"

We hope both Roger and the Free Press will sleep better when we name the winners as Jeanette Macdonald and Clark Gable. They each took in better than $1,000 a week during the filming of it. Ours we are leaving out Samuel Goldwyn?

Canada's Favourite Tea

"SALADA" TEA

TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Era: I notice in last night's Telegram that the Newmarket council is waging a war on the poor dumb dogs because their masters do not supply them with the necessary tag. Might I suggest that the council should wage a war, and that is not maybe, on the way motorists are allowed to drive through our town, especially up Huron and Prospect.

A child's life, apparently, to them is of no value, let alone a poor dog's life, and it is quite a common sight to see motorists go down Prospect at 50 miles an hour. This includes a number of our own citizens. These same drivers would not dare go through Aurora or Richmond Hill at 30 miles an hour under the present law and yet we allow this to go on in our town. Wake up, town fathers, before a little life is taken. It will be too late then.

Masons Must Be Tolerant Of Other Opinions, Pastor Says

The annual church service of the Masonic Order took place on Sunday afternoon in St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church with the rector, Rev. F. V. Abbott, in charge, and Rev. Mr. Knight of Alliston as special preacher.

Mr. Knight delivered a most inspiring address on the text, "Honor all men, love the brother, hood, fear God, honor the King." He said he knew of no better text on which to base Masonry. Its four-fold idea embraced all that every Mason should be.

"There is no place," he said, "where religion ends and Masonry begins."

He stressed the need of tolerance in these days of intolerance. If Masons would "love the brotherhood" they must respect all people's views and opinions. We do honor our earthly king, and especially this past week when, he said, "I was never more proud that I belonged to the British Commonwealth of Nations. But we must also honor the King of Kings."

Following the sermon the choir and congregation joined in singing "God Save the King," followed by the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Mr. and Mrs. H. McClure and Rae had dinner at the home of Mr. John McClure on Sunday.

A very nice coronation program was held in Bogartown on Tuesday of last week with 15 visitors present. Mr. Stickwood acted as chairman and introduced Mr. David Evans, who gave a splendid address on "Why the Coronation?"

Mr. E. Starr also said a few words, after which the chairman invited Mrs. John McClure and Mrs. Chas. Toole to the front, and they had the honor of pinning the coronation badges on the pupils of the school.

After singing "God Save the King," the teacher, Miss Forth, planted two spruce trees, and each scholar was given a Scotch pine to plant.

Several from the community attended the Newmarket and Aurora coronation celebrations.

Pottageville

A group of C. G. I. T. girls of Toronto will present themselves at the United church, Pottageville, on Sunday to carry on the church service.

Choir practice will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Elder on Wednesday.

Mr. E. O'Brien of Toronto was up for the weekend at his residence.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Jarvis and daughter, Helen, visited Mr. and Mrs. O. Emmerson of Nobleton on Sunday.

On coronation day many trucks

loaded with happy youngsters passed through the village.

Williams - Hilborn

The marriage took place in Toronto on May 12 of Mr. R. Williams, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Williams, of Pottageville, to Miss E. Hilborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hilborn of Kettleby.

The bride was dressed in coronation blue. The bridesmaid was Miss K. Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Black of Kettleby. The best man was Mr. G. Burt-Guerans, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. Burt-Guerans of Toronto. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. Mr. Hunt, minister of St. John's Anglican church, Toronto. The bride and groom left for an unknown destination.

OCTOBER EGGS FROM LATE MAY CHICKS

Cockerels 4½ to 5 lbs. at Thanksgiving — or 6 lbs. and Over for the Christmas Trade

RAPID growth and early maturity are even more important in late May and June chicks than in earlier chicks. If you happen to buy a slow-growing strain of chicks in late May or June, you don't have eggs to sell till the high-price season is over. But quick-growing stock gives you a chance to make some real money.

Bray's May-hatched "Xtra-Profits" pullets, if well reared, will give you high-priced eggs to sell in October, November and December—and keep right on laying through the coldest winter months. They have a countrywide reputation for wonderful livability and extra-rapid growth. When well handled, they usually commence to lay at 5 months old (or younger) and often reach 50% production before they are 6 months old. We can back up these statements with actual evidence from every Province in Eastern Canada.

It's the same with cockerels as with pullets. Bray's "Xtra-Profits" cockerels, when well fed, usually gain a pound a month and sometimes more. You can finish May-hatched "Xtra-Profits" cockerels at the popular 4½ to 5 lb. weights, by Thanksgiving—or hold them to make 6-lb. roasters (or better) for the Christmas trade. There's money in chickens when you get growth like that—and we have ample evidence to show that our customers are getting it.

Our prices are down to rock bottom. Don't buy until you see our end-of-the-season price list. We can supply "Xtra-Profits" day-old chicks, day-old pullets, and started pullets for immediate delivery—and cockerels if ordered in advance. Choice of 7 breeds, Standard Grade stock in the same 7 breeds at still lower prices. Write or 'phone today for complete information.

After a short trip the couple will reside in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Weddell, Belhaven, Ont., wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Beatrice Roberta, to John Alexander Boag, eldest son of Mrs. Boag and the late Percy S. Boag of Queensville, Ont. The marriage to take place in June.

ATTEND MASONRY REUNION

Messrs. W. J. Patterson, Arthur Winn, J. O. Little, Ken Silver, Wyatt Moorthy and B. W. Hunter attended the Scottish Rite Masonry reunion in Barrie Monday afternoon. Rev. Capt. W. L. Lawrence of Toronto accompanied the party to Barrie.

MOTHERS ENTERTAINED BY TRINITY C. G. I. T.

The annual mother and daughter banquet of the C. G. I. T. was held in the Sunday-school room of Trinity United church on Saturday, May 8, with 125 in attendance. The room was artistically decorated in coronation colors with flags and banners, under the supervision of Norman Williams.

The color scheme was carried out beautifully on decorated tables, with cut flowers and place cards of the ships representing the ship of life.

Audrey Geer, as toastmistress, made a charming and capable master of ceremonies.

Jean Smith proposed a toast to the guests, which was ably responded to by Mr. G. D. Wark. Mavis Wainman proposed a toast to the church and Sunday-school, to which Rev. J. H. Wells and Mr. W. R. Stephens replied.

A toast to "Our Mothers" was given by Joyce Bohwell and responded to by her mother, Mrs. Frank Bohwell.

Dorothy Lundy proposed a toast to the C. G. I. T.

During the evening Mrs. A. L. Dunn rendered a beautiful solo, "Mother," with Mrs. Aubrey Bailey as accompanist at the piano.

Doris Eves contributed a lovely piano selection.

The guest speaker, Miss Eunice N. Tyhurst, secretary of the girls' work board in Toronto, delivered an excellent address on the theme, "Being a Girl." Miss Tyhurst has had wide experience in girls' work and was able to give valuable information. She stressed the importance of living up to high ideals—"Seek truth—Know God—Serve Others."

Mrs. Seldon, superintendent of the C. G. I. T., expressed her appreciation to the leaders and friends who assisted in making the banquet such a success, especially to Miss Meeda Williams and Miss Vera Geer, who were responsible for the evening. These ladies made suitable replies.

MISS HARBOUR SPEAKS

Last Sunday afternoon a goodly number of people turned out, in spite of the inclement weather, to hear Miss Harbours, who gave an address entitled "God's Armaments" in the Presbyterian church. Miss Harbours is secretary to Rev. E. J. Springett at the headquarters of the British Israel Federation on Sherbourne St., Toronto, and is far advanced in British Israel teaching.

Beside her wonderful speaking voice, she gave a particularly fine address with a wealth of illustration which kept her large audience intensely interested for an hour and a half. Her illustrations, taken from scripture and from history, ancient and modern, were very apt and convincing.

Next Sunday J. S. Eason, editor of The Periscope, will be the speaker, continuing his former talk on pyramid truths.

CLUB HEARS OF EUROPEAN TRIP

The Cherokee club met Friday night for their last meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. J. E. Nesbitt, Main St. Miss Annie King gave an interesting and vivid description of her trip abroad last summer, touching on points of interest in Great Britain and many other European countries.

Sacrificing if need be, to enable one to make such a trip and realize one's life-long dreams is well repaid, it was felt, not only in the actual thrill of travel but also in the many beautiful memories which remain.

Although rain fell almost steadily during the 56-day tour, Miss King said the landscape was beautiful to look upon, and flowers, particularly roses, seemed to grow profusely everywhere.

London, always a centre of interest to everyone, Miss King described as a city of homes where even the shums are far above the average of most cities. The shops display their wares differently than in Canada, sometimes one large room being used to set forth the fine points of one single gown.

There is no delay in travelling in England and traffic is well and adequately handled, Miss King stated. With no level crossings to contend with, accidents are few.

Passing on to Scotland, the quaint customs of the people were described, as was also their war memorial which is really an old castle in which is a silverasket containing the names of 10,000 dead who fell in the Great War. The birthplace of Robert Burns was also visited.

In Norway, Sweden and Denmark, where hours of night are few, fruits are in abundance despite the chilly air. Many of the people engage in wood-carving, samples of which Miss King had brought to show the club.

The trip through Germany, France, and their great cities was most fascinating. Almost every place had its cathedral and grave to the Unknown Soldier. The French, to the casual observer, seem an unhappy, careless people, the speaker continued, with a very definite feeling of hatred for the Germans. Miss King

Holland Marsh Growers Hear Lecture On Fertilizer Use

Producers in the Holland marsh gathered in Ansonveld on Monday evening to hear Dr. W. H. C. Knapp, an agricultural adviser from Holland, talk on the subject of soil fertilizing.

Dr. Knapp pointed out that the formation of carbohydrates (cellulose, sugar and starch)—the so-called assimilation process—can only take place if sun, air, water and green leaves are disposed of.

The sun and the air are practically beyond human control, but air is luckily found everywhere. Water can be influenced by irrigation, whilst the surface of the leaves can be enlarged by dressings with nitrogenous fertilizers. Moreover the assimilation process can be stimulated per unit of leaf surface by dressings with phosphatic and potassic fertilizers.

Besides, carbohydrates plants build up other organic matter indispensable for human and animal life, such as organic acids, fats, albumins, amides. For the formation of some of these products plants want other minerals.

As a rule, however, the soil only wants nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. It is of great importance to apply to the plants these three elements in the right proportion, that means to feed the plants harmoniously.

As the basis of effective fertilizing Dr. Knapp mentioned the texture of the soil. As a rule a bad texture is caused by insufficient drainage, by a lack of organic matter or by shortage of lime. The speaker pointed out how land can be well drained, how the percentage of humus can be increased and how the soil should be limed. Only on land with a good texture and for most crops neutral reaction can one expect the most economic results of dressing with artificial.

After a short survey of the principal types of soils, Dr. Knapp drew the attention of his audience to the fact that the soil can be most economically enriched with plant food by means of artificial fertilizers. If a soil is lacking a special plant feeding element to a high extent, one has to make use of a straight fertilizer, containing that element.

Secondly, it is always advisable to regulate the dressings with nitrogen according to the crop's requirements and in the most suitable form of the

"We expect $200,000,000 to be spent in the next year or two. Already the plan has put five or 10,000 people to work. We expect to put the whole 60,000 to work. It is expected that money borrowed will be only one-third or one-fourth of money spent. For loans of up to $1,000 you have three years to repay, for over $1,000 up to five years.

"It is cheaper to have the roof mended now than to let further damage result."

"No other country in the world enjoys such a low rate of interest for this type of loan.

"The average loan so far has been $250.

"The scheme is for the borrower who has the ability to repay. If you borrow $100 for a year you get $96.75.

"In the United States, where there were $500,000,000 loaned, the government's loss was only one per cent.

"You can make any improvement which becomes a permanent part of the house itself."

Explaining the banking side of the plan, H. E. Lambert, manager of the Bank of Toronto, spoke for the local banks.

"A great number of people are bashful about coming in and laying their needs with regard to remodeling before the banks," said Mr. Lambert. "Homes have become dilapidated. Repairs need to be made, plumbing and redecorating need to be done.

"With this scheme the government has enabled you to consolidate your indebtedness to the various tradesmen, even if they were in a position to extend credit to you. There is no red tape. You sign a note and fill in the government forms.

"There are men unemployed, houses needing repair, and the banks with millions of dollars lying idle."

Representatives of the Johns-Manville company explained their various building products and showed an interesting picture, "The House that Ann Built," illustrating the use of insulating materials and other products.

PUBLIC SOLIDLY

"And whereas the most direct route would pass through the town of Newmarket, this placing our town, which is the largest centre between the two points, on one of the provincial highways, which will very considerably add to the business life of the town and community.

"Therefore be it resolved that this club urge our town council to strongly represent the advantage of the construction of the said highway in the most direct route aforesaid, and in doing so the members of this club, representing the business and professional life of the town, assure the council of our whole-hearted support and co-operation to the end that this highway be constructed.

"And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the town clerk for the attention of the council."

BANDSTAND CAN'T

element: ammonia or nitrate. Taking these two points into consideration the number of compound fertilizers can be considerably reduced.

The most economic compound fertilizers is the concentrated in granular form. These granulates are either composed of nitrogen and phosphoric acid and called then NP fertilizers, or of these two elements plus potash and then called complete or NPK fertilizers. As suitable for crops and pasture land Dr. Knapp mentioned 16x10x18 (composed of muriate of potash), for beans and peas 12x24x24, for vegetables, fruit trees and root crops 14x10x18, all composed of sulphate of potash. In case a soil is rich in potash, 25x20x0 can be used, in case of a great deficiency in phosphoric acid 13x50x0 or 25x50x0, in case of a soil rich in nitrogen 4x20x30.

An average dressing is 600-800 lbs. of a concentrate containing about 40% of plant food. The most suitable time for application is some time before sowing or planting, though the granulates can also be used as top-dressing.

As advantages of the granulates Dr. Knapp mentioned good and regular friability without causing dust; no precautions; little water attracting; water soluble; quick and regular action; late application and top-dressing; no burning of leaves; practically homogeneous; great variety; little or no decalcification of the soil; little or no carriers; free from chloride unless buyers want this element; less salt in the soil; less storage; less heaping up of bags; saving of transport and distribution; excellent results; efficient and fine packing; odorless, and low price.

Finally, Dr. Knapp drew the attention of his audience to the fact that the costs of fertilizers are relatively small in comparison to the total costs of production and to the fact that there exists hardly another factor which influences so much the crops, not only in quantity but also in quality, as the artificial fertilizers and he advocated experiments with the A. S. F. Granulates on a not too small scale by everybody who runs a farm.

After the speaker had answered a few questions, the meeting was closed in the usual way.

the waterworks that I think that would be a good site for a bandstand, not so far from the Main St., where most people are."

"The memorial is a natural place for it," said Mr. Evans.

"The trouble with getting a bandstand is lack of money," said Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd. "There are a lot of people who don't appreciate music. So it is not customary to take money out of public funds for such a purpose. Let public-spirited citizens, who are interested in music, get busy, and take up a subscription. The band should do something about it themselves."

"When the firemen needed a new truck, they got the first $3,700 themselves," said Councillor W. W. Osborne. "I took us two years. I think the band should take the initiative."

"The trouble is that they get very few paid engagements," said Mr. Evans.

SMOKE BUT NO FIRE

A train whistle that sounds like the town fire whistle is threatening the efficiency of local fire prevention. Fire Chief W. W. Osborne introduced a resolution, seconded by Councillor Wm. Dixon, and adopted by the council, at a town council meeting Monday evening as follows:

"That the C. N. R. through Mr. F. Cook, be requested to have the whistle of the passenger engine that runs through this town changed, as it is so much like the sound of our fire alarm whistle, and causes some confusion when this engine goes through morning and evening."

WOULD AID FESTIVAL

Telling what a wonderful event the York County Musical Festival has become, and how 600 musicians and singers took part this year, Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd urged the town council on Monday evening to give a shield which was still needed for this year's festival.

"Out of the public funds?" chided Reeve Dr. W. Dales, who had been similarly queried by Dr. Boyd earlier in the evening on a proposal to do something about a bandstand for the town.

The proposal to give a shield was made by Dr. Boyd just at the end of the meeting and the council did not take any action one way or the other. The shield would cost $10 or $12.

Dr. Boyd expressed the opinion that the festival might be held in Newmarket at some future date.

Co-operative In Stockholm Has An Island Of Factories

Folk High Schools Have Been Factor In Co-operative Progress

By Alden McLean

(Taken from the Rural Co-operator)

There are some 400 co-operative stores, or Konsums as they are called, in Stockholm and 4,000 in all of Sweden. All appear to be very clean and modern. Usually the entire front of the store is an unbroken pane of glass so that not only the window is on display but the entire store. The floor is covered with a kind of linoleum in wide bands of different colors. Wrapping is done in the back storage room so as to have the goods immediately ready to serve the customers.

Co-operative managers are trained at the co-operative school at Var Gard. One is amazed at the enthusiasm these workmen have for co-operation. They are proud of their head office building, recently erected and modern in every detail. They took me to their co-operative island just on the edge of Stockholm harbor. I shall never forget as we walked along, coming in view of the island, my guide stopped me and, in order that I would get the full significance of it, he said slowly, "This is OUR island." The flour mill, macaroni mill and bakeries on the island are equipped with very modern machinery. In design of building, one observes that two things have been kept constantly in mind, namely, satisfactory conditions for workmen and the turning out of a good product to the consumer.

There was a monopoly of electric light bulbs throughout the Scandinavian peninsula. The co-operative societies of Denmark, Sweden and Finland decided to go into the manufacturing of electric bulbs. As a result the price of electric bulbs has been reduced 40 to 50 per cent. Various methods were attempted by the private monopoly to bribe the co-op away but without success. The president of K.F. was called to a conference in

LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE LADIES HOLD MEETINGS

An enthusiastic meeting, the second in a series, was held at the home of Mrs. Max Smith, Millard Ave., last Monday evening, in the interest of the Women's Liberal-Conservative organization. It was decided that the next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Alex Rutledge, Huron St., Monday evening, May 31. Everyone interested in the Liberal-Conservative organization is requested to attend. Transportation will be furnished for all, cars leaving corner of Main and Timothy Sts., Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Geneva. There the representative of the monopoly suggested that if the co-op factory started up there might be very low prices for electric bulbs in Sweden. The co-op president said that was exactly what the consumer wanted. "But," he countered, "you want the interest of your money, don't you?" "Our money," replied the president, "belongs to the consumer and if they get their bulbs very cheaply they shall be more than satisfied." No argument or bribe, however, could deter the co-op from its purpose and today they have a modern electric bulb factory.

In Scandinavia, one continually asks oneself what has made the people such wonderful co-operators. The most amazing thing about it all is that about one hundred years ago they were very backward, almost serfs. The Danish farmers did not own their farms. They were whipped. Today 97 per cent own their farms. They have the best developed co-operative movement in the world. In explanation, the leaders of the movement would tell of Gruntvig and his folk high schools that swept across Denmark. They would tell me that they educate to live, to live in the community. There are 65 folk high schools in Denmark, some 2,200 night schools and thousands of clubs.

Increased Prices Of Farm Machinery Not Justified

Special Committee Declares Competition In Prices Not Effective

(Taken from the Rural Co-operator)

"Over the period 1891 to 1936, retail prices of farm implements have been maintained at too high a level; the cost of distribution of farm implements is unnecessarily high; and farm implement companies should make every effort to reduce these costs or farmers should be encouraged to organize for the co-operative distribution and servicing of farm implements," are a few of the more important of 36 conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the special parliamentary committee on farm implement prices.

Other conclusions and recommendations were as follows:

The companies engaged in the industry, over the period of their operations as a whole, have made substantial profits on the capital invested in each company.

From 1931 to 1934 inclusive, when all the companies incurred financial losses, such were due primarily to the inability of the farmer to purchase farm implements, coupled with his inability to pay for those he had already purchased, and not to the fact that prices of farm implements were lower than justified by manufacturing or distribution costs.

The matter of freight rates on farm implements should receive immediate attention with a view to restoring lower rates thereon.—Freight rate increases having contributed to the increase in the price of farm implements.

In the farm implement industry there is competition in the matter of sales but little effective competition in the matter of prices. The cost of credit to the

SCHOOL VISITORS
(By Pedagogue)

We wonder how many schools have a visitors' book in which all visitors record their impressions during their visits. We wonder if any visitors, especially parents of the pupils, are encouraged to visit the school and have an opportunity to hear lessons and observe present-day methods of teaching.

We used to hear a song, "Oh Dear! What can the matter be, dear dear, what can the matter be, parents don't visit the school." We believe it would be of great benefit and be the means of clarifying the feeling that sometimes exists between the home and the school. Many misunderstandings would be eliminated and more sympathy would be aroused pro and con.

farmer purchasing farm implements on time is excessive and the companies should take immediate steps to reduce these credit charges.

The profits to the farm implement companies on the sale of replacement parts is excessive and the price of these to the consumer should be materially reduced.

The increases announced by the companies in January, 1936, were not justified by an increase in manufacturing or distributing costs or by the financial results of the companies in so far as these were affected by the price level of farm implements.

After due consideration of all the essential factors, the committee is of the opinion that any suggestion of a further increase is not justified at the present time.

J. Fred Johnston was chairman of the committee.

Wiring Of Farm Buildings Should Be Done For $80

Farmers Are Employed On Power Line Construction

(Taken from the Rural Co-operator)

Those in charge of the Rural Electrification Administration at Washington are insisting that farmers be employed for the building of power lines through rural districts. In a contract amounting to $75,000 for building a line, labor costs would amount to about $30,000. They figure that each farmer who would work on construction of the line would make $100 or $125, which in most cases would be enough to install electric power in his farm buildings. This information was obtained from Dr. Craig, who is director of education for the REA at Washington when he, along with Mr. Judson King, veteran writer and organizer for head office recently. Dr. Craig

The Mayor — "You know, I haven't seen your husband since he returned to civil life."

The ex-Captain's wife — "You mean since he was released from the army, don't you? He never was very civil."

also informed us that his administration had gone out and wired a farm in order to learn what is a fair charge for doing so. They selected a farm which they considered to be typical of the average farmstead in the States. They figured that they did a good standard job, not fancy, not expensive, but adequate and safe. They put in simple switches. In the homes, for example, they put one plug in each room but made provision for adding more where such might be required in the future. The cost of the job, satisfactorily done, and good enough for any farm was $80.

FLOWERS AT HER FEET

By MARIE BLIZARD

COPYRIGHT, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER 40

Your heart does not stop beating. Even if there is ice in your veins, you can walk and move.
You can walk slowly into a room and sit down and compose yourself. You may want to run out of a house and into the night, screaming for assurance that what you've heard is not true.
But you don't do it because people would say, "Why?" and
"Whatever is the matter?" and
"Poor Bill, he's gotten himself into something with this strange girl."

And you can't hurt Bill.
Even though you are stretched and torn and suffering on the side of a mountain beside a cracked-up plane. Oh, no, not now! By now they have gotten to him. He's comfortable now.
Perhaps he doesn't feel. They've given him a merciful opiate.
They always don't they?
Don't let him suffer.

"Yes, isn't it dreadful?" you hear yourself say.
And that face that you know
as Bill, which floats toward you and away from you, says, "Sayre?
Say, Alix, isn't that the man who is president of the ad company you used to work for?"

And you say, "Yes," and that's all you can say. You get upon your feet and murmur, "Excuse me," as though you were going upstairs for your purse.

You even walk upstairs slowly
as though you were going for your purse.

You go into Gretchen's big bedroom that serves as the ladies' dressing room for tonight and you are alone.

Alone with the thing you have heard. Alone with the tortured visions that tear you apart.

For an instant Alix stood there staring at a white-faced girl.
She didn't know her for a minute
because the patches of rouge stood out like two bruises on her cheek. She didn't know herself twisting with the pain that was gathering itself into a terrible sob.

Then it came and Alix sank to the floor, her arms outstretched on the bench of the dressing table. The sobs came up and crowded between her teeth, choking her breath while her heart tried to escape her in an incessant cry:

"John! Oh, dearest! Help him!
John!"

For how long she was there calling his name she didn't know.
Somewhere in back of her she heard a door close quietly. She felt strong arms lifting her up.

She pushed a girl in a white dress aside and went into the bathroom, where she held cold, wet cloths to her eyes until she had composed herself. Then she went back to the bedroom to face Dorcas Hill.

Dorcas was brushing her hair.
"Thanks," Alix said with a voice that was still trembling.

"Forget it," Dorcas said. "Shall
I ask Bill to take you home?
Everybody knows you are pretty well exhausted."

"Thanks again," Alix said.
"Tell them I'm having a nervous breakdown. I guess I am."

Dorcas didn't say anything.
She went downstairs to find Bill.
Bill took Alix home. It was a strange, silent journey for an engaged couple.

"Dorcas gave me something for you," Bill said, when he was leaving Alix at the door of her home. "She said you'd need a good night's sleep."

He put a small envelope into her hand. She read the name of the bromide.

She took the bromide, but she didn't sleep until long after dawn. It seemed that she had just fallen off into her horrible dreams when she heard a knock at her bedroom door.

It was morning.
"Come in," she said.

Dorcas Hill opened the door,
came in, and closed it at her back.

"Hello, Alix," she greeted her gravely and with some of her father's professional air. "How are you this morning?"

Alix tried a small smile. "I'm all right this morning," she said.
"You look it," the other girl said, and Alix looked across her bed to the mirror. She saw a girl with a blanched face, with deeply circled eyes, still red with weeping. She saw blue veins in her trembling hands.

Dorcas took a bottle of spirits
of ammonia from her bag,
emptied a little in a water glass,
added some water, and gave it to Alix.

"Drink it, my dear. I want to talk to you."

Alix drank it, felt better, and waited.

"Why don't you tell me about it? You can trust me," Dorcas said.

"Tell you about what?" Alix parried.

"We're both intelligent women,
Alix. You know what I mean.
Please believe I haven't come here to be unkind. I've come here to save all of us. I can't wait until night when I followed you upstairs, I didn't do it to pry on your privacy, to spy on you. You were so white when you left the room, I was afraid you were ill.
Then I saw you, heard you call,
'John!' You see, I've been in love and I know what that cry means. Why don't you tell me about it?"

His name—his dear, beloved name—tore Alix.

Genile tears rolled down her cheeks.

"Dorcas, I'll have to tell you or else I'll break inside. I loved John once."

"You love him now," Dorcas said quietly.

"Yes, I always will. Once I thought he loved me, but another woman told me that he didn't,
so I had to put him out of my life. That was right, wasn't it?"

"No."

"But it was!" Alix persisted.
"When a man loves another woman, you can't do anything about it."

"Yes, you can, if once you thought he loved you."

"One thinks of her pride," Alix said haughtily.

"Oh, no, you don't!" Dorcas retorted.

"What do you do?"

"I'll tell you what girls like you do. Perhaps you don't mean to be selfish, but you think of no one but yourself. Trying to escape from yourself, you still think of no one but yourself."

"You take and take!"

"I? But I have nothing!"

"You have brains and you have beauty. You have all the things a woman needs to rebuild her life. You have youth and time to wait. Men are crazy about you. Probably all the men you've known. You have chances to meet other men if you haven't the spunk to go after the man
you love."

Alix lay back on her pillows with widening eyes.

"I don't know what you mean,"
she said in a little voice.

"Yes, you do, Alix Carey.
Instead of . . . oh, let me ask you a question: Did you believe that your John loved you?"

"Well, you've tried it and it didn't work."

"No, it didn't, did it?"

"Shall I call for you at five?"

"No, Dorcas, thank you. I'll go off by myself. I prefer it that way, but I won't leave a note for Bill. There are some cowardly things I won't do. I happen to think a lot of him and I'm not going to do things that way. I have several things to do. I have several calls to make today. I'm going around to all our friends and tell them that Bill and I have taken things over and felt that this was not the time for us to get married. I'll tell them that I've been called back to New York to my old job because I'm needed. I don't want people here to think that I jilted Bill. He's too good for that. Then—I'll spread her hands in a forlorn gesture—"I'll go away and see what turns up."

"You'll go back to your John."

"That is one thing I will not do."

Then, Alix proceeded with her plan.

"I want to go down to the shop, Bill," she said that night.

"I want to tell you something that concerns only the two of us, but I've asked Mae Alexander to meet us there because she is my best friend in Baidersvale. One of your best friends. I want her to hear it, too. I think perhaps you will understand better.
Please don't ask me what it is."

Bill didn't ask her. He had seen Alix troubled before, but he had never seen her as obviously upset
as she was when he came back from Sioux City that evening.

"Whatever is the matter?" Mae demanded when the three met in the dim shop.

"Sit down, Mae. You sit down, Bill. This is pretty hard for me to say, but it has to be said. I asked you to come here, Mae, because I think you understand me, and because, perhaps, Bill will not."

She walked back and forth, back and forth, twisting her hands, trying to find the kind of
and the most convincing words.

"We're not going to be married,
Bill. Oh, don't say anything,
please, until I've finished . . ."

She plunged on:

"I've been blind and selfish
and a little desperate, but now I see quite clearly. You've both got to know and believe that I wouldn't have done this to you
had I been in my right mind."

"I ran away from New York
because I couldn't bear to stay
there and be reminded daily in
a hundred ways that my heart was breaking. I came out here to forget. I didn't, but all pain gets numb after a while and mine
did. I was never happy here,
but I wasn't unhappy, and after
a little while I began to think that this shell I live in would last forever."

"Then, Bill, I was weak and you were strong. You were the steady, sure, pleasant thing in my life." She didn't look at Bill
who sat so quietly.

Mae said, "You're overwrought, Alix, and don't know what you're saying."

"Yes, I do, Mae. I can say this because I know it isn't going to hurt Bill as much as you might think it will. Last night I heard that the man I love was critically injured in a plane crash. It made everything clear to me. It showed me that I have nothing to give Bill, and it showed me plainly that Bill loves me but he is not in love with me."

"Alix!" Bill jumped to his feet.

"No, please, Bill," she implored him.

"Don't let's kid ourselves. Mae has seen how little like a bride I've been. And you, Bill, you forgot about a honeymoon. Look, darling, you've always felt like a knight in armor when I've been around. And that's wonderful but that isn't the way men and women love each other. I know.
And I know you'll find the real girl for yourself. Perhaps you did."

Mae looked at them both unhappily.
"Alix, you can't do this to Bill. What will people think?"

"It doesn't matter what they think about me. I think I've fixed it for Bill. I've told everybody that I've been called back to New York to my old job, that I'm needed and I feel I must go and Bill agrees with me. In a year or so . . . Then, in the meantime, our engagement will be broken and Bill will . . . oh,
Bill had friends before to count on."

Bill protested. The idea was ridiculous, unheard of. Alix was worn out with excitement.

"Wait a minute," Mae spoke thoughtfully. "I'm beginning to see why Alix wanted me here.
She's right, Bill. She's a grand person in every way, but she is not the one for you. I'll say something Alix wouldn't. In a little while, folks here will be glad to see that you and Dorcas are going out together again.
Why can't you be as honest as Alix? She's told you she's in love with another man. And anybody with half an eye could see long before she came that you were in love with Dorcas Hill."

Bill did not deny it.

"So there it is in a nutshell, and you can thank your lucky stars that Alix was intelligent enough and brave enough to meet a situation that needed meeting. I shall miss Alix but I feel that with her courage, she never fear nothing any more."

"Give me your hand, Bill, and tell me you forgive me," Alix
said.

Alix stood on the platform as her train bore her into the New York terminal. She glanced impatiently at the small watch on her wrist.

Four twenty-five. If she got a taxi and had any luck with traffic she could make the run to Lexington avenue and Forty-second street before the Sayre agency closed. She had to do it.
She had to know what happened to John Sayre.

"Check my luggage and bring me the checks," she said to the "red cap," and clutched her bag
under her arm. There was $500 in cash in that bag. All the money she had in the world.
Pleasant to live on until she got a job.

"Hello, Miss Gleason," she said to the receptionist at the agency.

"Well, stranger! Hello, Miss Carey. Where've you been?"

"Away," she said. "I just heard about Mr. Sayre's accident . . .
and I was passing by and I thought I'd drop in to see if you could tell me how he is."

"Wasn't it terrible? . . . Good night, Mr. Grimes. . . There's something mysterious about it, Miss Carey. They brought him to the dorm hospital, but he was moved last night. You can't get a bit of information around here about what happened to him or what hospital they took him to. Mr. Coulton says we're just to say that he's doing nicely."

"He is?" Alix inquired with relief.

"That's what they say, but you know these plane crashes. Why don't you drop in from time to time if you happen to be around.
I'll give you the news."

"I . . . I will," Alix said.

C. G. I. T. GIRLS, LEADERS

ATTEND CONVENTION

About 45 C. G. I. T. girls with their leaders, Mrs. M. B. Seldon,
Miss Bertha Nollis, Miss Meada
Williams and Miss Vera Geer, attended the annual C. G. I. T. convention held in the United church at Richmond Hill last Friday and Saturday.

An address of welcome was given by Miss Jean Middleton of Richmond Hill on behalf of that group. During the conference several excellent addresses were enjoyed, interspersed with camp sing-songs.

Miss Anderson, formerly of Richmond Hill, who has studied art in Toronto, gave some valuable information in her address on art. She also displayed many fine samples of her work in painting, sketching and embroidery.

"We're not going to be married,
Bill. Oh, don't say anything,
please, until I've finished . . ."

She plunged on:

"I've been blind and selfish
and a little desperate, but now I see quite clearly. You've both got to know and believe that I
wouldn't have done this to you
had I been in my right mind."

"I ran away from New York
because I couldn't bear to stay
there and be reminded daily in
a hundred ways that my heart
was breaking. I came out here to forget. I didn't, but all pain gets
numb after a while and mine
did. I was never happy here,
but I wasn't unhappy, and after
a little while I began to think
that this shell I live in would last
forever."

"Then, Bill, I was weak and
you were strong. You were the
steady, sure, pleasant thing in my life." She didn't look at Bill
who sat so quietly.

THE FURROW'S END

by LEONARD HARMAN

THE FOUR-HORSE EVENING

Last week we had some remarks about a three-horse even and about two horses pulling unnecessary loads while one went without exercise. We went on further to tell of two men working 12-hour days while one was unemployed and another lived in luxury without labor. A critic has challenged our comment with a suggested remedy.

He says in effect: "Your overwork could be remedied by more efficient organization. At present you each hurry through a lot of chores to get two outfits of horses in the field. One man drives two horses; one drives three; each spends seven hours a day in the field. That means two men are working five horses for seven hours. The land work is taking 14 'man-hours' per day. At the same time it is taking 35 'horse-hours' per day.

If one man would do the greater part of the chores and the other take four horses, the man with the horses could spend nine hours in the field. This would mean that for nine 'man-hours' you would get 36 'horse-hours.' Provided you use a larger cultivator, each 'horse-hour' should accomplish as much work under the new arrangement as under the old. You would get the same results with nine 'man-hours' as with 14 'man-hours'.

"Of course the man in the field would do two hours less chores, so the man at the stable would need to do two hours more. That means that you save three 'man-hours' per day instead of five. But even then you could reduce your working day from 12 hours to the more reasonable length of ten and one-half. You could keep one less horse or you could give the brood mares a better chance."

The criticism and suggestion of my friend is welcome indeed. I must admit that the arrangement he suggests is a practical one for the saving of labor. Of course we do not cultivate every day, but even then the truth of his contention is not destroyed. Other means might be used to reduce labor in other quarters if sufficient thought were given to it. It would be at least possible to reduce the working day from 12 hours to 11.

But what of the other two men? One unemployed because he is too poor and the other because he is too rich. Reorganization of the individual farm will not solve their problems. No job is thereby made available for the unemployed. In case the farmer buys a new cultivator the labor required to build it will not be such a great item compared with the work it will perform. And if our friend in the shiny car happens to be interested in the implement factory he may be richer still.

Four-horse even or three-horse even there is a much larger job to be done in social reconstruction than can be performed by farmers within the limits of their own line fences.

School Notes

(By Pedagogue)

PARENTS AT SCHOOL

A unique event was that of a principal and his teachers inviting the parents to a school session held from 7:30 to 8:30 in the evening. Parents saw their children being taught different subjects. After the dismissal of the pupils, the teachers discussed their progress with the parents, answering any questions.

Then all repaired to the assembly room where the principal addressed them. He said the main object in teaching was to build character and to prepare for good citizenship. Children required firm discipline. Many parents profess to believe in this until their own children get disciplined. Taking the part of the child against the teacher usually did the child much harm, resulting generally in disregard for other forms of authority.

CO-OPERATIVES GATHER JUNE 8

Representatives of various co-operative organizations in York county met in Aurora on Saturday evening to plan a big get-together. The date was set for June 8, but as yet the place has not been chosen.

Mr. Hull of Indianapolis, who is president of National Co-operatives Incorporated, the great federation of American co-operative wholesales, is expected to address the meeting. Milk Producers, United Farmers, Aurora District Co-operative Society, Pickering College Community Extension Service, and other bodies are promoting the idea.

"Funny," said the "colonial" visitor to England, "that you have so many baby cars over here."

"Funny, nothing," retorted the Englishman, "isn't this the mother country?"

Former Deputy-Reeve Of E.G., Horse, Cattle Breeder, Dies

The death occurred very suddenly on Thursday evening, May 6, from a heart attack, at his home, 85 Simpson Ave., Toronto, of William George Hill, husband of Sarah A. Rogers, in his 68th year.

The late Mr. Hill was born in Scott township, of United Empire Loyalist parentage, but lived most of his life in the Queensville district, though he spent three years in Saskatchewan and three years in Newmarket. He lived for the past nine years in Toronto and attended the United church.

Last year Mr. Hill was made a life-member of the Canadian Percheron association. During his lifetime he judged horses in every province in Canada except the maritimes, and at time of death had almost completed a set of models for the Ontario Percheron association. He was a member of both the Royal Winter Fair and Canadian National Exhibition executives.

Mr. Hill was a well-known breeder of Percheron horses and Holstein cattle. He was for some years a member of York county council as deputy-reeve of East Gwillimbury.

Surviving are his wife and six children, William R., at Queensville; Mrs. M. E. Doane of Willowdale; J. Walter, at Sydenham; Byron S., of Port Perry; W. George, of Kentville, and S. Mary at home. Two sisters, Mrs. F. Ardill of Toronto and Mrs. E. Raitlon of Saskatchewan, and 16 grandchildren, also survive.

The funeral was held on Monday from the residence and Queensville United church. It was conducted by Rev. W. E. Wilson and Rev. S. Greenslade of Toronto. The play put on by Newmarket Y. P. S. in the community hall was much enjoyed by the audience which filled the hall. It was well performed and, being an unusual type of play, showed much credit to those participating.

There was lots of excitement and interest in "The Scarecrow Creeps," which showed how imagination sometimes exaggerates.

Pot - Pourri

BY GOLDEN GLOW

I saw something in the paper that pleased me more than a little the other evening - no doubt many others saw it as well for it was written up in the editorial column. Here was the item just as I saw it:

"Leave Trilliums in place to golfers, once flower picked, plants die, letter explains. One golf course owner has apparently discovered that there are other assets to a golf-course besides greens and fairways and caddies and fresh air."

"In a letter to the members of the Royal York Hotel Golf Club Ltd. this week Godfrey Pettit says: Did you know that once a trillium is picked the plant left in the ground dies? The trilliums in the woods bordering the course have been thinned out terribly in the last year or two."

"We would very much appreciate your help in saving the plants that are left."

There is the little plea for our wild flower which as you know has been adopted as the flower of Ontario. The editorial ends this way "You pick the trillium and it grieves and withers while the plant itself grieves and dies. There will be no trillium, therefore, in that place next year."

Ontario's! What a tragedy if through our own thoughtlessness we exterminate the beautiful delicate emblem. It is so very fragile that it is withered and useless for a bouquet long before you can reach home with it. If you must pick it, why not take root and all and replant in a suitable place in your home garden, where it will rejoice your heart again next year. That is, provided you do not pick the blossom.

You will be weary of me telling of that wonderful square patch of trilliums we saw two years ago for the first time in Prospect Park, Niagara Falls, on the American side. Can I ever forget it? It was fairly carpeted with them. All in full bloom. It was fenced off into paths, with notices not to pick the flowers, and a small second growth trees made a little grove of it to give them a natural surrounding. It will be once again in full bloom and if I cannot see them "in person" I can see them in memory.

Let us be wise like our neighbors to the south and conserve what we still have—for they are getting fewer and fewer every year.

In the days when we had a flourishing Home and School Association here, well do I recall making a plea for the wild-flowers, asking that the teachers give instructions to their classes on the care of what nature has so freely bestowed. I wonder did I do any good—I was terribly in earnest, at any rate, and did what I could!

And to end up I want to tell all and sundry that the golden oriole, that royal bird, came back again this year to my big maple tree and he woke me up with his glorious song on coronation morning.

"No," replied the youngster, "he does not practice now, he knows how."

ates. "A message from our King," was the topic of the sermon at Zephyr United church on Sunday. The coronation service was truly a service of dedication to the sovereign of the empire.

In the words of Premier Baldwin, "It is a challenge to all in our empire to dedicate themselves to the service of our fellows," as the king accepted the orb it was interesting to learn that he also took the oath of allegiance to the world, which is the empire of Christ.

"No greater challenge could be accepted by the membership of the Christian churches and by so doing we will not only uphold British traditions but the call of Christ, who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords," the pastor stated.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"They're right here, Muriel. I'll send them home now!"

Don and Patsy Watson love to call on their Dad's Aunt Mary. Scarcely a week goes by when they don't drop in at least twice, for stories and cookies. So, on any afternoon, when they are later than usual in getting home, their mother doesn't worry. She simply waits till the deadline and then calls up Aunt Mary. This is just one of the things that makes the telephone indispensable to the Watson household. It saves so much anxiety and such a lot of work that Mrs. Watson wouldn't be without it.

The rates for residence telephone service are surprisingly low—only a few cents a day. You really cannot afford to be without a telephone.

MOUNT ALBERT KIRK STEWARDS ENACT PAGEANT

Dr. and Mrs. Duncan being called to the chairs, which had been decorated, were crowned king and queen for the evening. Representatives from each country came with their gifts which they presented. Musical numbers and readings were also given pertaining to each nation, after which contests followed and a very nice evening came to an end with "God Save the King." The proceeds were about $40.

On coronation day a number of the community gathered at the park to plant oak trees which came from the royal forests of Windsor, England, and as there had been a program sent to follow it was carried out by the president of the Horticultural society, Mr. Ed. Watts, assisted by Dr. Duncan and the school children.

Miss Leek, whose father was one of the early settlers, planted one of the trees in the Memorial Park, and there were others planted at the cemetery by W. R. Steeper, and also at the park on the hill, by Miss E. Smith. Some of the children present may remember this little service when the trees have grown and they are the older generation.

A number of acorns have been given to members of the Horticultural Society to grow in their gardens until large enough to plant in the park.

Newmarket W.C.T.U. EXPLOITATION, LIQUOR'S FAVORITE TACTIC

The liquor traffic stands ready to exploit any circumstance in sight for a price. Last January a calendar picturing the Dionne quintuplets was circulated by a brewery advertising the manufacture of ice. A deputy liquor commissioner of Ontario asked its withdrawal on the plea that the guardian of the quints objected.

Another exploitation is, to get some old-time drinker of whiskey to avow his belief that his years are due to drinking plenty of this stuff.

Fortunately there are other old-timers who make the rational opposing claim.

Last March Tidings' eye caught a notice, giving much publicity, of "Elora's grand old man," who was brought by his parents from England, and who finally settled near Elora. Last March he celebrated his 90th birthday. To cite the summing up of his long life as given by himself:

"I've never had a horn of whiskey in my life, nor have I ever played cards or danced."

But Elora's "grand old man" won a prize at a skating carnival the previous year.

His hobby is work, and he attributes his long life to temperance living, and a result of the continual observance of the commandment "Honor thy father and thy mother."

The Era is a welcome* visitor in hundreds of homes in York County. It pushes no doorbell to gain entry; it brings no sigh from the busy housewife: "Well, there is another agent." It is no handbill cluttering up automobiles, nor blowing around from dooryard to dooryard. It is not a mailed circular that attracts only passing attention and is thrown aside. No man coming in from his day's work sits down and asks his wife: "Where is the latest mailed circular?" but hundreds of them ask, "Where is The Era?"
